

We should NOT ammend our amateur bands for foreign use.
This will this open up the logistics of ALL countries demanding the same provisions for their "frequencies".
Also, enforcement of these bands are impossible which means your giving the frequency to the general public not only foreign users, but also american users.

There is no need to allocate MORE frequencies for open public use.
GMRS and FRS radio frequencies are more than enough, not to mention the CB bands are still usable.
And if you listen to CB radio, you will quickly see where the FRS and GMRS bands are headed... a wasteland of bad language and foul tempers.

Again, the amateur bands should NOT be re-allocated just because a few people don't want to buy radios that are compatible with the US frequency band.

Doing so will cause all sorts of commercial radio companies to "lobby" other bands under a similar premise of similar situations to open more bands for them to sell more radios. Cell phone companies will demand similar treatment to gain access to more frequencies for "foreign" phones.

This could be a very large disaster if allowed to occur. Please DO NOT re-allocate any of the amateur bands.
